Springfield College in Springfield, MA, invites applications for a tenure-track position of Assistant Professor of Environmental Biology. The College seeks a broadly trained biologist who can teach introductory level biology, upper division courses in ecology and plant biology, and upper division courses in support of a new interdisciplinary environmental science major. Preference will be given to candidates who are excellent and innovative teachers and who can engage undergraduate students in research and fieldwork projects in environmental biology.

Candidates must possess a doctorate in biology or environmental biology from a regionally accredited institution and expertise or experience with environmental regulations and policy. Experience mentoring undergraduate Environment Club students or sustainability efforts in a campus setting is also valued.

Founded in 1885, Springfield College is internationally renowned in the allied health sciences, human and social services, sports and movement students, and the arts and sciences. Campus life is guided by the distinctive Humanics philosophy: education of the whole person—spirit, mind, and body—for leadership in service to others. More than 5000 traditional, nontraditional, and international students study at its main campus and satellite campuses of its School of Human Services in eight cities.

Please send a letter of application, current resume or curriculum vitae, all educational transcripts, and the names and contact information for 3–5 professional references to: Dr. Anne Herzog, Dean of Arts, Sciences, and Professional Studies, Springfield College, 263 Alden St., Springfield, MA 01109. E-materials welcome at asps@springfieldcollege.edu.

Initial review of applications will begin on 2 January 2013.

Springfield College is committed to enhancing diversity and equality in education and employment.
