

About the Contributors

Professor Andrew Blakers is the Foundation Director of the Centre for Sustainable Energy Systems at the Australian National University. He has a physics degree from ANU and a PhD from the University of New South Wales. He was a Humboldt Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Solid State Physics in Stuttgart and has held ARC, QEII and Senior Research Fellowships. His research interests are in the areas of photovoltaics and sustainable energy systems. <http://solar.anu.edu.au>

Associate Professor John Burgess is Director, Employment Studies Centre, and Assistant Dean for Research, Faculty of Business and Law, University of Newcastle. His research interests include gender and work, workplace change, employment restructuring and labour market policy.

Dr Colin Butler, a co-founder of BODHI, a Third World development organisation, has visited the Third World many times. He is currently writing The Human Titanic, a book about global inequality and sustainability. He is a coordinating lead author for the chapter on human well-being in the scenarios working group of the Millennium Ecosystem Assessment and is a research fellow at the National Centre for Epidemiology and Population Health at the ANU.

Associate Professor Julia Connell is Deputy Director, Employment Studies Centre, and Assistant Dean (International), Faculty of Business and Law, at the University of Newcastle, Australia. Her research interests include change management, organisational effectiveness, various aspects of temporary work, call centres and labour turnover.

Professor Peter Cullen, FTSEAO, is one of the Wentworth Group of Concerned Scientists who seek to raise public awareness of natural resource issues facing Australia. He is Chair of the Victorian Water Trust Advisory Council, and a Director of both Land and Water Australia and Landcare Australia Ltd. He retired in 2002 after 10 years as Chief Executive of the CRC for Freshwater Ecology at the University of Canberra. He is a Visiting Fellow