BOOKS

Manipulative Monkeys: The Capuchins of Lomas Barbudal, by Susan Perry and Joseph H. Manson. 2008. Harvard University Press. 368pp. ISBN: 978-0674026643. Manipulative Monkeys takes us into a Costa Rican forest teeming with simian drama, where since 1990 primatologists Susan Perry and Joseph H. Manson have followed the lives of four generations of capuchins. What the authors describe is behavior as entertaining –and occasionally as alarming– as it is recognizable: the competition and cooperation, the jockeying for position and status, the peaceful years under an alpha male devolving into bloody chaos, and the complex traditions passed from one generation to the next. Interspersed with their observations of the monkeys' lives are the authors' colorful tales of the challenges of tropical fieldwork –a mixture so rich that by the book's end we know what it is to be a wild capuchin monkey or a field primatologist. And we are left with a clear sense of the importance of these endangered monkeys for understanding human behavioral evolution. Contents: 1. All in a day's work; 2. The social intelligence debate and the origins of the Lomas Barbudal monkey project; 3. The challenges of foraging and self-medication; 4. Predators, prey and personality; 5. Capuchin communication; 6. Two females' political careers; 7. The career of an alpha male; 8. The strategies of incoming alpha males; 9. Lethal aggression and the importance of allies; 10. Capuchin mothers, infants and babysitters; 11. Innovation and tradition in the creation of blood-testing rituals; 12. Social learning and the roots of culture; 13.
